WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1781.

Admiralty-Office, June 27, 1781.

CAPTAIN Smith, of His Majesty's Ship the Centaur, who was coming from St. Kitt's to England in the Snake Sloop, with Dispatches from Sir George Brydges Rodney, had the Misfortune to be taken on his Passage by Two American Privateers, and was under the Necessity of throwing all his Dispatches overboard; but being afterwards put on Board a Danish Ship, and landed at Plymouth, arrived here this Morning.

What he relates upon Memory is, That on Saturday the 28th of April, at Ten o'Clock in the Morning, the Russell and Amazon, cruizing between St. Lucia and Martinico, got Sight of the Enemy's Fleet with a very large Convoy; upon which Sir Samuel Hood with his Squadron made Sail to Windward, in Hopes of being able to prevent the Enemy from getting into Fort Royal.

On the next Morning, between Seven and Eight o'Clock the Enemy's Fleet, consisting of 21 Sail of the Line, Four Frigates and a Cutter, were seen off St. Ann's Bay, bearing down round the Diamond Rock to cover their Convoy, at that Time standing close along Shore under the Batteries, in order to get into Fort Royal Bay. At Half past Eleven the Enemy, being between the British Fleet and the Shore, were joined by Four Ships of the Line from Fort Royal Bay; immediately after which, the Enemy having the Weather Gage, and both Fleets standing to the S. E. with the Larboard Tacks on Board, the Action began, and continued till Ten Minutes after Three in the Afternoon, when the Van of the Enemy made Sail and hauled their Wind, and the Firing ceased on both Sides. The Van and Center Ships of the British Fleet, from the Situation of the Two Lines, had necessarily the greatest Share in the Action. Sir Samuel Hood kept Sight of the Enemy till One o'Clock on Wednesday Afternoon; but, notwithstanding his constant Endeavours, was never able to bring them a Second Time to Action. Sir George Rodney, with the Sandwich and Triumph, together with the Russell, Centaur, Torbay and Intrepid, which had repaired their Damages, was to sail from St. Kitt's the 10th of May to join Sir Samuel Hood, and had sent Orders to the Panther, then cruizing to Windward, to do the same; so that his Fleet now consists of 21 Sail of the Line, with which he intended to proceed off Fort Royal, and offer the Enemy Battle.

General Vaughan came from St. Eustatius to St. Kitt's in the Sandwich, intending to proceed from thence to Barbadoes.

THE following is a Copy of Sir Samuel Hood's Line of Battle, with the Number of Men killed and wounded in each Ship, in the Action.
